

LIFTED AWAY
© 2008 Rebecca Roubion

Sometimes I feel alone
All the day long
So I write me a song
Sometimes my head is like a stone
Weighing heavy
On my bones

You are the line that separates
Courage from sin and love from hate
Its hard to differentiate

You know about me
You couldn't doubt me
If ya tried

Sometimes I cannot hear you
And I want nothing
More than to be near you
Lately I'm so empty and I want nothing
For you to console me

It is the needle in my eye
I was born broken, deaf, and blind
You, you clear my mind
You are my senses
Your love transcended mine

And you always see right
Through me Cause I carry a window
On my front, my skin is ripped apart

One look in your eyes
And this heart
Is lifted away

It is aligned with tiny suns
Floating above where time is spun
Floating in splendid majesty
One very simple cost
One single battle lost
War was won